

MOLTEN GOLD

When it comes to making honey, we have made 0 progress.

And so it should be. Honey is purest and most authentic in its raw form. Unlike many other foods, honey does not require any processing, refining or other technological improvement.

Just like fresh cow's milk, or pristine glacial water, honey is best consumed straight from the source. With the least human interference possible.

From hive to home in just 2 steps

1. Honey is collected by our traditional Beekeepers
2. It is bottled and sealed to reach you

It's that simple. At Molten Gold, we are committed to retain the purity of honey by keeping it as untouched as possible. Before bottling, there is only a basic filtration to strain away impurities like beeswax or dust. In the case of our range of Infused Honey, there is an additional step of carefully adding the extracts of spices/herbs for additional health benefits.

No pasteurization. No refining. No adulteration. From beehive to bottle to you.

What makes natural honey so pure?

The short answer: honey bees.

Honey starts at first as nectar inside flowers. Worker bees travel for kilometres around the hive to collect this nectar in 'nectar sacs' and return home.

Once they reach the hive, it is transferred from one bee to the next, deep into the hive. Every time this transfer happens the nectar get mixed with the enzymes in the bees' sacs and starts turning into honey, although still with a lot of moisture. To further thicken the honey the bees flap their wings to evaporate the water (from 70% to just 20%). This honey is stored in honeycombs, as food for adults and the young, and as surplus stock during the winter.

Collecting honey is a never-ending job. Honey bees spend their entire lives doing it. And they would sacrifice their lives to protect their hive.

This is how honey is made.

It is a natural wonder and considered sacred in many cultures.

Natural honey needs no preservatives. Since it is acidic in nature, no bacteria can thrive in it.

All we need to do is collect it ethically and enjoy its wonderful benefits.

Benefits of Natural Honey

Natural honey is a wonder food full of benefits. But in order to enjoy the benefits, it must be used in its purest, most authentic form. Honey is often pasteurised to increase shelf-life or kill naturally-forming yeast. But this has adverse effects on its nutrients. Some manufacturers even adulterate honey with sugar syrup for profit. At Molten Gold, we keep the purity of honey intact so that you can enjoy the following benefits:

- Lowers blood pressure, improves heart health as it is full of antioxidants
- Decreases bad cholesterol, promotes good cholesterol
- Promotes burn and wound healing
- Works as cough suppressant, good for a sore throat
- Kills unwanted bacteria and fungi
- Aids digestion

Honey and the beekeeper

At Molten Gold, we support local beekeepers who have been in the occupation for generations. Beekeepers who know their nook of the Sahyadri Hills like the palm of their hand, understanding the nuances that come with the change of seasons and climate.

They collect honey regularly from the hives with utmost care, always making sure to leave enough for the bees. The human-bee partnership is a special and highly rewarding one. And the honey collecting process has remained roughly the same ever since we discovered it 10,000 years ago.
